Conference Description

TRAUMATOLOGY

of Domestic and Sexual Abuse

This conference offers a chance to explore the connections between trauma and domestic and sexual abuse from many perspectives. Participants will learn about the basics of human brain development and memory systems and how trauma can impact them. Experts will teach how to assess the effects of trauma on individuals and family systems.

An academic panel will share current research and theories in an interactive forum. Participants will increase their knowledge of the effects of trauma on clients, whether survivors or perpetrators. There will be opportunities to discuss intervention and programming options while networking with other professionals who intervene with domestic and sexual abuse.

BISC-MI Mission Statement

- ☞ We will provide a working forum for interaction and information sharing among agencies and individuals concerned with the provision of batterer intervention services in Michigan.
- ☞ We will help create and maintain coordinated community actions that hold batterers accountable for their behavior and promote safety and empowerment for victims.
- ☞ We will give safety, needs, and concerns of victims/survivors priority over the interests of batterers or any batterer intervention service model. We will promote social change which works toward a society based on equality and nonviolence.

Conference Faculty

Dr. Peter Jaffe PhD, C. Psych.

Dr. Jaffe is a Professor in the Faculty of Education at the University of Western Ontario and the Academic Director of the Centre for Research on Violence Against Women & Children. He is the Director Emeritus for the Centre for Children and Families in the Justice System, which is a children's mental health centre specializing in issues which bring children and families into the justice system in London, Ontario.

Dr. David Lisak, PhD

Dr. David Lisak is an associate professor of psychology at the University of Massachusetts Boston where he conducts and supervises research on the causes and consequences of interpersonal violence. In particular, he has studied the motives and characteristics of "undetected" rapists – men who rape but who are never prosecuted. He also studies the long term effects of childhood abuse in adult men, and the relationship between early abuse and the later perpetration of interpersonal violence. His research has been published in leading journals in psychology, trauma and violence, and he was the founding editor of the journal, Psychology of Men and Masculinity. In addition to his research and teaching, Dr. Lisak serves as faculty for the National Judicial Education Program, and the American Prosecutors Research Institute, and has served as a consultant to judicial, prosecutor and law enforcement education programs across the country.

Rus Ervin Funk

Rus Funk is the author of Reaching Men: Strategies for Preventing Sexist Attitudes, Behaviors and Violence, and has been working for more than 25 years to address social, racial, gender and sexual justice throughout the country. The way I work, and try to live my life, is based on James Baldwin's quote "The most radical step you can take...is your next one"— and that the strive for justice (in our relationships, as well as in our neighborhoods, communities, the country and the world) requires one step at a time. Each step, for each person, is the most radical step that a person can take.
